More Selective DDC Ethics Enforcement

An attorney who hurled "hostile, obscene and derogatory" missives at his wife and professionals involved in their divorce, has been suspended for two years by the Appellate Division, First Department, which rejected a three-year censure requested by court's disciplinary staff.

Anthony Chiofalo, the attorney at the center of Matter of Chiofalo, M-3073, married in 1990. His wife, with whom he had two sons, filed for divorce in 2005. The case apparently has not been resolved, according to the decision.

During the course of the divorce, Mr. Chiofalo, against the advice of his own attorney, sent written messages that the court said were "riddled with profanities (primarily of a scatological and sexual nature)," to his wife, her lawyers, his sons' law guardian and the law clerk assigned to his divorce case. At one point, Mr. Chiofalo "threatened to cut off one attorney's pinkie and send it to his wife," the court said. He also questioned, without basis, the integrity of the judge handling the case and accused his wife's attorney of dishonesty and exploitation of the couple's children in order to obtain excessive fees. The panel noted that Mr. Chiofalo had pleaded guilty in the Bronx Criminal Court to a disorderly conduct violation based on his contacting his wife and children in violation of an order of protection. While acting as his own lawyer, he also filed a federal lawsuit in California where he had been living, against 29 defendants, including his wife, her attorneys, a judge and three supervising judges and the American Bar Association, claiming his civil rights had been violated. The First Department disciplinary committee brought two charges against Mr. Chiofalo related to the conduct related to his remarks and two related to the allegedly frivolous federal lawsuit.

Mr. Chiofalo, 49, conceded two disciplinary charges stemming from his vituperative correspondence, but contested two charges arising from his filing of the lawsuit in California. He claimed that his actions had been the product of "stress over his divorce and financial situation," and that his behavior did not harm any clients. He asked that he receive at most a six-month suspension.

The referee before whom the hearing was conducted upheld the two charges related to the lawsuit. The First Department panel upheld the ruling, finding Mr. Chiofalo had "effectively conceded" that the suit was frivolous, seeking to draw attention to "issues of parental alienation issue" rather than seeking relief a court could award.

The referee recommended a one-year suspension. One of the disciplinary committee's hearing panels upheld the referee's findings as to the charges but bumped the penalty up to a two-year suspension.

The legal staff of the First Department 80-member disciplinary committee, with the approval of its chairman, Roy L. Reardon, a partner at Simpson Thacher & Bartlett, asked the court to increase the suspension to three years.

In rebuffing the staff request for a longer censure, the panel found the request "appears" to be out of line with the court's prior rulings. In that regard, the court said that Mr. Chiofalo's conduct was "not as serious" as that reported in its 1994 ruling in Matter of Israel, 205 AD2d 101, where an attorney had been given a three-year suspension in circumstances that were more "serious" than Mr. Chiofalo's.

The attorney in the Israel case had made three motions designed solely to harass his client, lied under oath, frustrated a judgment against him, neglected or mishandled several other client matters and lacked contrition, the panel noted.

But the panel also rejected Mr. Chiofalo's plea for leniency, noting that "while divorce proceedings can certainly be distressing, especially when children are involved, they do not excuse long-term spiteful actions." As to his claims that no clients were harmed, the court said the individuals he named as defendants in the federal lawsuit were "victims of his misconduct."

Mr. Chiofalo started his legal career after graduating from Fordham University School of Law practicing corporate law in both law firm and in-house settings. More recently he has been hired as a contract lawyer on various projects. Currently, he has advised the court according to the opinion, that his work has been "paralegal in nature."

Mr. Chiofalo's lawyer, Michael A. Gentile, said, "The decision is certainly consistent with the court's having reflected carefully upon the case."

Serving on the First Department panel were Justices Angela M. Mazzarelli, Karla Moskowitz, Rolando T. Acosta, Helen E. Freedman and Rosalyn H. Richter.

Mady J. Edelstein handled the matter for the Departmental Disciplinary Committee.

Hey, Mr. Chiofalo, Allen Isaac got a mere six month suspension for felony level sexual abuse..Did you pay your dues to the DDC for protection? It's WHO you know, not WHAT you know!!!!

Now I know I understand.

They can lie, cheat, steal and terrorize, they just can't swear.

So as long as the attorney's are polite, they can get away with any and everything they want.

Nice system.

Whenever there is a disciplinary action for any crime, it is usually the attorney is trying to expose them so they come back with this to bury the dirt. Wonder what his complaint exposed, why they are so hard on this guy, two years for swearing but rapist pervert slimedog Allen Isaac gets six months for raping a woman and then covering it up.

Look deeper into this case, someone call the disbarred lawyer and get his side. The only other complaints the DDC prosecutes are people acting like attorneys without legal degrees or witchhunts like this.

When are they going to shut down these useless agencies?

These lawyers & judges can commit any felony, including Federal Felonies, and there is no one to call, no one to investigate and charge these criminals!

From Eliot's facebook page,

Elliott, you're a jerk.

September 14 at 1:41am • Eliot Bernstein

Will please refrain from your insults of me and calling my wife to scare her with your threats to her. You seem so two year old with these antics of yours.

September 14 at 5:48am •

William Galison

Elliot, that is ridiculous, You have my message to Candace, If there is anything threatening about it:

- a) Post it on the internet
- b) Get a restraining order.

...There was not anything threatening about it, which is why you won't.

Candace and I had a lovely talk, and she told me that you had asked Frank to take down the personal conversation you posted. That was before you implied that I am somehow linked with the CFR, Skull and Bones and Proskauer Rose.

In response, I called you a jerk, which under the circumstances was pretty discreet. Feel free to call me a jerk anytime, especially if I make bizarre, baseless, paranoid remarks about you on a blog.

But you are right, I should have ignored you, which I will certainly do in the future.

You are a silly silly man,
Will

September 14 at 10:16am •
Eliot Bernstein

So are you saying sue me you sound like one of these pricke lawyers

Yesterday at 6:30am •
William Galison

No, Elliot. I am saying that for some reason you are lying about me "scaring" and "threatening" Candace, and I'm giving you a chance to prove me wrong.

Today

Eliot Bernstein Will you called my wife, now something is very wrong with just that but despite that you told her all these peoples lives were in danger and she was somehow to be responsible if people got killed like Sunny Sheu or Jim Hoffer of ABC news. ...My wife lives starting a car in the morning with three children waiting for the next bomb to attempt to murder us, I do not think she needs your veiled threats. I am just not sure what kind of man calls another man's wife and tries to have her intervene in their affairs, it is just so... So Please, pretty please with bme on top, leave us alone, we have enough real life worries to contend with and if you want to threaten someone with fear of others being killed, call me, if I don't answer or don't call back, take the hint and move on.

Eliot Bernstein

Westchester Braces for Onslaught of Federal Corruption Indictments

Informed sources have revealed that Westchester County, along with parts of Rockland, Bronx and Manhattan Counties, are about to be rocked by a series of corruption indictments. Federal Investigators have been working for nearly three years on the ever-growing and wide-spread list of charges, says the source. "The extent of public corruption in Westchester is staggering- a panoply of crime yet uncovered in the United States. The indictments will hit many of New York's most influential in politics, finance and the legal community." Starting October 29, 2009, we'll be highlighting some of the involved issues..... ## In Fairness to the Courts...

It is not easy being a judge, and disgraceful that the public usually only hears about the bad judges. And while this forum attempts to expose the reprehensible acts of corrupt courts, it is important to be fair to the many under-appreciated law-abiding judges and court employees. Judges are grossly under compensated, and must rely heavily on unnamed staff who sometimes carry their own biases and improper political agendas. So let's expose and eradicate the corruption, but we are socially obligated to consider: (1) how do we get our judges adequately compensated; and (2) what specific and constructive suggestions can be made and implemented to insure the integrity of our courts. Send, too, ideas to make the courts a better system for all of us!!

Our year-long investigation has confirmed that the purported judicial "ethics" enforcer, The New York State Commission on Judicial Conduct, is itself a biased, corrupt group that protects certain judges while destroying others who have become targets of the political thugs who control them. Something is terribly wrong when even our honest and law-abiding judges are failed by our justice system. The New York State system of justice is a corrupt process that has all but ruined the faith of the people in their government.
