NEW YORK - Ruth Proskauer Smith, a reproductive rights pioneer, has died at the age of 102. In 1969, Smith helped form the first steering committee of the National Association for the Repeal of Abortion Laws.

In recent years, Smith remained involved with NARAL (NAY'-rahl) Pro-Choice New York. Her father, Joseph M. Proskauer, served on the New York State Supreme Court and was an adviser to Gov. Alfred E. Smith. Her mother, the former Alice Naumburg, helped found the Euthanasia Society of America, a right-to-die group. Even after her 102nd birthday, Smith led a regular seminar at a program for retired professionals. Her son, Anthony Smith, says she died Friday at her Manhattan home.

ANOTHER ONE BITES THE DUST

Ruth Proskauer Smith, 102, has reportedly died in NYC.

Background info on Ms Smith (I assume she IS a MS, since she is left of center). In 1962 she helped form NARAL (National Association for Repeat of Abortion Laws).

Her parents: Judge Joseph Proskauer, NY Supreme Court & advisor to Gov. Alfred Smith (why does Smith ring a left-wing bell in my ear?), and her mother Alice, helped found the Euthanasia Society of America, a "right-to-die" group. This was a very death-oriented family!

Ms Smith finally knows what it's all about. And it wasn't the hokey-pokey.

Ms Smith's family background and the things they were involved with truly makes me wonder. How did they get to the point of living for death? What about those issues---abortion and euthanasia turned them on? Maybe they truly thought that they knew what was best for others in this world. Maybe they truly thought that by removing "undesirables," "accidents," and "unproductive" individuals the world would thrive and be a much better place.

The trouble with that worldview is that you get to thinking that you are the only one with the answers---that there is no higher Person nor a higher moral ground than your own whims. Maybe they were only seeking "perfection" in an imperfect world. In 102 years Ms Smith was not able to accomplish that. She never would have. No one ever will. When we become perfect and without those in need, we cease to care about others. If no one ever was helpless, weak, defenseless, or "imperfect" in some way, then we would have no need to love, help and care for them. The blessing turns on ourselves when we are the agents of care and compassion. Those who are helpless, weak, defenseless, and imperfect teach us many moral lessons and make us better individuals in our hearts and minds. It is a shame that Ms Smith and her parents apparently never learned this lesson.

VI. The League of Treason

The umbrella organization for the establishment, at the heart of the coup plot, encompassing both the hard and soft-core fascists, was the American Liberty League. Set up in August 1934, this ``League of Treason'' included some of the coup plotters, along with others who backed the fascist goals of the coup; all were unified in their hatred of FDR and the New Deal.

The two people running the League were, Jouett Shouse, a protégé of Du Pont lawyer and Morgan operative, John J. Raskob. A former Congressman from Kansas and Assistant Secretary of Treasury during the Wilson administration, Shouse had gained the reputation of a political ``fixer,'' much like the present day Robert Strauss. In 1928, the banker's operative Raskob, a former director of General Motors, was moved into the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee, running the disastrous election campaign of Al Smith, insuring a Hoover victory. Not wishing to give up control of the party to the political machines, Raskob brought in Shouse as the executive director of the national committee. As soon as Roosevelt was in a position to do it, he moved to get rid of both of these ``inside'' men.

The League's initiating executive committee were Morgan-allied stooges: Morgan's lawyer, John W. Davis, the former Democratic presidential candidate; Iránée Du Pont, who ran the Du Pont fortune now controlled by the Morgan interests; Nathan Miller, the former GOP governor of New York and a Morgan preferred list member; Rep. James Wadsworth of New York, a Republican and supporter of the gold standard; and Al Smith, the ``happy warrior'' who had been totally corrupted by Morgan money, and who had headed the corporation that built and ran the Empire State Building. This group was expanded to include additional prominent leaders of finance and business, with a heavy emphasis on Morgan allies. On its Advisory Council, were, among 200 others: Dr. Samuel Hardin Church, who ran the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, and who was a mouthpiece for the Mellons; W.R. Perkins of National City Bank; Alfred Sloan, the man the Morgans selected to run General Motors; David Reed, a U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania, who in May 1932, said on the floor of the Senate, ``I do not often envy other countries and their governments, but I say that if this country ever needed a Mussolini, it needs one now;'' E.T. Weir of Weirton Steel, who was also known as a supporter of fascism. On its Executive Committee was Morgan stooge and former New York Supreme Court Justice Joseph M. Proskauer, the general counsel to the Consolidated Gas Company; J. Howard Pew of Sun Oil and the funder of the openly fascist Sentinels of the Republic; and Hal Roach, the Hollywood producer, who like many of his compatriots was an open admirer of Mussolini, and who was later to become a partner with Mussolini's son in a Hollywood production company, R.A.M. (``Roach and Mussolini'') Films, Inc..

The League's treasurer was none other than Grayson Mallet-Prevost Murphy!

The League was active, with a high profile, attacking FDR and the New Deal, especially through 1934-35. With the exposure and collapse of the coup plot, it soon disappeared from the political map.

July, the Morgan-Mellon controlled press (including Henry Luce's Fortune magazine) unleashed a propaganda blitz extolling the virtues of fascism. In August, the American Liberty League appeared. Butler had been informed of the appearance of this group as part of the plot beforehand.

Morgan and du Pont cronies (including John J. Raskob) funded the League. Included in the League's advisory council were Dr. Samuel Hardin Church, who ran the Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, W.R. Perkins of National City Bank; Alfred Sloan, CEO of GM; Joseph M. Proskauer, former New York Supreme Court Justice and the general counsel to the Consolidated Gas Company; J. Howard Pew of Sun Oil and the financier of the openly fascist Sentinels of the Republic; and David Reed, the Republican Senator from Pennsylvania who remarked on the floor of the Senate in May 1932: ``I do not often envy other countries and their governments, but I say that if this country ever needed a Mussolini, it needs one now."''

The Anti-Nazi Boycott

In late January 1933, Adolf Hitler was appointed Chancellor of the German Reich. Immediately, members of Hitler's Nazi Party began a campaign of violence against German Jews, socialists, communists and other Nazi opponents. Germany's Jewish Central Association (Verein) issued a statement asserting its belief that "the responsible government authorities are unaware of the threatening situation" and that the Verein had thus "dutifully apprised [the Hitler administration] thereof." The Verein's statement concluded, "We do not believe our German-fellow citizens will let themselves be carried away into committing excesses against the Jews." As early as 1933, however, Stephen S. Wise, founder of the American Jewish Congress, seemed to know better.

The Central Verein's appeals did nothing to stop the terror against Jewish businesses. Stink bombs, picketing and shopper harassment by Nazi Party thugs continued for several days in Magdeburg, Essen, Kassel and Berlin. Herman Goering announced, "I shall employ the police, and without mercy, wherever German people are hurt, but I refuse to turn the police into a guard for Jewish stores."

When word of the assaults reached America, representatives of the American Jewish Committee, B'nai B'rith and the American Jewish Congress met in New York. The conferees established a joint committee to monitor the situation but agreed that organized public protests in America would further undermine the already precarious position of German Jewry. Less than a month later, however, the American Jewish Congress changed its mind and called on its partners to help organize an American protest campaign. On March 12, 1933, the AJCongress resolved to hold a mass protest rally at Madison Square Garden in New York City. A week later, the organization convened an emergency conference of Jewish organizations that 1,500 individuals attended.

At the emergency meeting, the AJCongress announced its intention to hold a Madison Square Garden rally on March 27th. J. George Fredman, Commander-in-Chief of the Jewish War Veterans, called for an American boycott of German imports. After Fredman spoke, Joseph Proskauer and Judge Irving Lehman of the American Jewish Committee publicly counseled restraint. Lehman feared that any rally in America "may add to the terrible dangers of the Jews in Germany." Lehman pleaded, "I implore you in the name of humanity, don't let anger pass a resolution which will kill Jews in Germany."

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, honorary president of the American Jewish Congress, had the final word:

The time for prudence and caution is past. We must speak up like men. How can we ask our Christian friends to lift their voices in protest against the wrongs suffered by Jews if we keep silent? ... What is happening in Germany today may happen tomorrow in any other land on earth unless its is challenged and rebuked. It is not the German Jews who are being attacked. It is the Jews.

The conference voted to hold the Madison Square Garden rally.

On March 27th, the AJCongress and its allies convened simultaneous protest rallies at Madison Square Garden in New York, in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland and 70 other locations. The New York rally was broadcast worldwide. An overflow crowd of 55,000 inside the Garden and in the streets outside heard AJCongress president Bernard Deutsch, American Federation of Labor president William Green, Senator Robert F. Wagner, former New York governor Al Smith and several Christian clergy call for an immediate cessation of the brutal treatment being inflicted on German Jewry.

The Nazi apparatus denounced the American complaints as slanders generated by "Jews of German origin." Goebbels announced a campaign of "sharp countermeasures" against these attacks. He accused German Jewry of engineering a worldwide boycott of German goods to destroy the German economy. To give Jews a taste of their own medicine, Goebbels announced that the following Saturday, April first, all good Aryan Germans would boycott Jewish-owned businesses. If, after the one-day boycott, the false charges against the Nazis in the overseas press stopped, there would be no further boycott of Jewish businesses. If worldwide Jewish attacks on the Nazi regime continued, Goebbels warned, "the boycott will be resumed ... until German Jewry has been annihilated."

The boycott came off as planned. German police and SS troops enforced store closings. Protestors smashed the windows of some Jewish-owned shops and department stores and forced others to close when Nazis set off stink bombs inside them.

Urged by Stephen S. Wise to protest to the German government, U.S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull issued a mild statement to the American ambassador to Berlin complaining that "unfortunate incidents have indeed occurred and the whole world joins in regretting them." He expressed his personal belief, however, that the reports of anti-Jewish violence were probably exaggerated. Unimpressed by Hull's tepid response, the Jewish War Veterans renewed their call for a boycott of German goods. The AJCongress, the American League for Defense of Jewish Rights, the Jewish Labor Committee, B'nai B'rith and others joined them shortly thereafter.

Of course, the American boycott did nothing to deter the Nazis, who escalated their violence against Europe's Jews until settling on the Final Solution. As Rabbi Wise observed, however, the boycott effort, whatever its effect, was a moral imperative. "We must speak out," he explained. "If that is unavailing, at least we shall have spoken."
