

...e to defend himself. But I think it's important to have a voice of reality added to all those chiming in on what a saint and amazing example he was.

If someone were to ask me if I thought Mitch was murdered or committed suicide, I would say I could believe both. Mitch had a lot of dark emotion in him and I could easily see him taking his own life. But I could also see how he would have cheated people and made enemies—some of them angry enough to kill him. I will say, given what I do know about Deborah's actions, I wouldn't be surprised at all if there wasn't something more going on there that needs to be uncovered. I'm finding hard to believe she's innocent in any of this, regardless of how Mitch died. Mitch made some very wrong choices in his pursuit of money and power and he hurt a lot of people. So, it's not all that unlikely that someone may have wanted to pay him back in an unkindly manner. My gut feeling is that he probably got involved in something shady and was about to be exposed and decided the only way out was to take his own life. But, fortunately, I'm not the one who has to find the answers or make that final determination. My heart goes out to you in your work on this case, as well as others I'm sure are just as troubling. I only hope anything I've offered here may be of some help and not a waste of your time. I would like to ask, if at all possible, that you not share what I've said here with any of his family. I have no desire to create ill will or kindle any bonfire Serena may still be stoking. Thank you.

I wish you all the best in your search for the truth and hope you will find peace along the way with whatever you find.

Thank you for your time,
